

Progress 7 Test Case:

Result:

- I have stuck with my French language learning application and have begun trying to utilise a translator. I may either make a language learning app for French learners or a translator with many other languages. Either way I think both ideas will be cool things others and myself should find value in using. I have utilised a text file I found on GitHub of thousands of French to English translations. And due to MATLAB's text scan feature I can utilise the text file to read the columns the translations and French words are in. Many issues are still present, but I am finally very happy with the idea and progress I have made.
