

Progress 10 Test Case:

Result:

- I have added a home screen that properly works with a wide range of functions that can be used through buttons. The screen shows when the user presses start, I did this through using call-back functions within the start button when it is pressed. Due to my experience in creating buttons through my other ideas forged at the beginning of the project I had no trouble adding them but only had a real challenge through the positioning and having them proportional to one another. I am thinking of adding a story feature as well to mimic but add my own taste on language learning applications. Due to my own experience with language learning I understand many of the common applications people use and pay for with the goal of increasing comprehension lack almost all of the things I have utilised and had great success with.

New Home Screen